The Vermont Environmental Court in the US - lessons for the UK?

An early evening seminar, chaired by Lord Justice Carnwath, President of UKELA

Tuesday November 1st: Registrations from 5.30; speakers from 6pm. Finish by 7.30 pm followed by drinks and nibbles.

Venue: Gustav Tuck Lecture Theatre, University College London

The UK Environmental Law Association in partnership with University College's Centre for Law and the Environment is holding an early evening seminar on November 1st featuring Judge Merideth Wright, who has had more than twenty years of experience presiding in the Environmental Court of the U.S. state of Vermont, the only judicial branch environmental court in the U.S. She is also working with judges in environmental courts and tribunals in New South Wales, Brazil, Kenya, Sweden, the UK and elsewhere towards establishing an international Judicial Institute to coordinate cooperation and judicial education among environmental courts and tribunals worldwide.

This seminar follows on from our very popular Environment Tribunal seminar, held in May 2011, which explored the practicalities of getting a tribunal up and running in England and Wales.

Main speaker:

Judge Merideth Wright, Environment Court, Vermont, USA

Panel: Mr Justice Lindblom; Nick Warren, President General Regulatory Chamber, Prof Richard Macrory QC of UCL and author of the recent report on strengthening the new environmental tribunal.

Our thanks to UCL's Centre for Law and the Environment for hosting this event.

Bookings: UKELA members £25

Non members £30

Students free (limited places) – a deposit of £10 is payable which is refunded on the evening
